

Residence Hall History at JMU

1984 — 2013

Hillside Hall

The third and final hall of the three Hillside Area residence halls, Hillside Hall was built in 1987. It replaced the modular homes that were used in the 1970s and 80s when campus housing was tight.

1987

Wampler Hall

Located on the Quad, the Hall was built in 1994. Its namesake was local businessman and former Board of Visitors member Charles H. Wampler Jr.

1994

1998

Potomac Hall

Located across Interstate 81 in the Skyline Area of campus, Potomac Hall takes its name from Virginia's Potomac River. It can house over 400 students.

2009

Shenandoah Hall

This is the second residence hall with the name Shenandoah; the earlier hall was demolished in 2006.

The Hall, located in the Skyline Area, was completed in 2009 and can house more than 400 students.

McGraw-Long Hall

The second of the three Hillside residence halls, this Hall attempted to appease the growing need for student housing in 1984. The Hall is named after members of the Board of Visitors, Nellie L. Long and Walter J. McGraw.

1984

Blue Ridge Hall

Named for the surrounding mountains, which the hall faces, Blue Ridge Hall was part of the effort in the 1990s to try and house as many students on campus as possible. It is located in the Skyline Area of campus. Today, the Hall houses various clinics.

1997

Chesapeake Hall

Built next to Potomac Hall in 1999, Chesapeake Hall is located in the Skyline Area of campus and can host more than 400 students. Its name is derived from Virginia's Chesapeake Bay.

1999

JAMES MADISON
UNIVERSITY®

Special Collections